

MAYO MADE ADMIRAL; GETS ATLANTIC FLEET

Man Who Caused Trouble
With Huerta Is the Successor of Fletcher.

CHANGE MADE TODAY

Appointment Praised—Retiring Commander to Have Shore Detail.

By United Press. WASHINGTON, June 19.—When Vice-Admiral H. T. Mayo succeeds Admiral Frank F. Fletcher in command of the Atlantic fleet today, he will be advanced to the rank of Admiral.

Rear Admiral De Witt Coffman, commanding the sixth division of the fleet, will be advanced to the grade of Vice-Admiral, succeeding Admiral Mayo. Admiral Fletcher will automatically become a Rear Admiral. He will receive an important shore detail.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels announced these changes after a conference with President Wilson. The Secretary also conferred personally this week with Admirals Fletcher and Mayo.

Long Record for Fletcher.

"When relieved of the command today," said Secretary Daniels, "Admiral Fletcher will have served a little longer than fleet commanders usually serve. He is a splendid officer and has accomplished much with the fleet. He has completed his tour of duty as commanding officer of the fleet, and there is no other reason for the change."

Admiral Mayo is an officer of great ability, and has rendered splendid service," said Mr. Daniels. "He has the confidence of the officers and men in the entire fleet."

Admiral Mayo is the man who precipitated the trouble with Huerta which resulted in the occupation of Vera Cruz by American forces. The Admiral insisted that Huerta salute the American flag because of the arrest of American marines at Tampico when they went ashore to get mail. Later marines were landed at Vera Cruz, and Admiral Fletcher was in command of that movement.

Selection Is Praised.

In service circles unanimous praise was given today to Daniels' selection of Vice-Admiral Mayo for the most coveted of posts. There is a particular feeling of satisfaction at the appointment because of the fear that Vice-Admiral Mayo's part in the Tampico affair during the critical days of the struggle with Huerta had placed the officer's star under a cloud.

But Admiral Fletcher proved a strong friend for Vice-Admiral Mayo, and when the Atlantic fleet was organized, Rear Admiral Mayo received command of the battleship squadron and of the first division, with the rank of vice-admiral.

Vice-Admiral Mayo comes to fleet command at the age of fifty-six, retiring in December 1918. His recent duties have been as commandant of the Mare Island Navy Yard, aid for personnel, and division commander in the Atlantic fleet.

M. U. MEN TO GRADUATE SCHOOL

Deans Mumford and Charters Will Help Direct Agricultural Study.

Dean F. B. Mumford of the College of Agriculture has been appointed a member of the Committee on Study of the Graduate School of Agriculture, which will be held this year at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., July 2 to 28.

Only graduates of recognized institutions granting the bachelor's degree are admitted to this school, except on special recommendations of the colleges. The school was organized seven years ago.

Among the lecturers this year appear the names of Dean W. W. Charters, of the School of Education of the University, R. M. Duggar of the Missouri Botanical Gardens and H. J. Waters, president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, a graduate of the University and former dean of the College of Agriculture here.

WOULD COMBINE DAIRYING WITH LAST OF THREE R'S

Teaching of arithmetic along with the principles of dairying in the rural school is advocated by Prof. P. M. Brandt, assistant to the dean of the College of Agriculture.

"Every rural school that attempts to teach this branch of agriculture," says Prof. Brandt, "should have in its equipment a Babcock tester, to ascertain the amount of butter fat in milk, and should have milk scales."

Professor Brandt believes that the teacher in the rural school can make both arithmetic and dairying interesting subjects to the pupils if the right methods are pursued. If the boy in the rural schools keeps a record of how much milk the individual cow is producing, using milk scales so that his conclusions may be accurate, and if he keeps another record of what the cow is actually costing in the consumption of feed, he will gain far more inspiration from these problems than from those ordinarily assigned the country lad in his textbook, Professor Brandt declares. He suggests that if the teacher in the rural school combines arithmetic and agriculture in this way a greater improvement will result. The teacher should point out the relative value of feeds, emphasizing that alfalfa and clover hay, rather than timothy and prairie, will make it possible for the cow to give more milk, and that corn put up in silage stimulates to greater production than when it "leeches" out in the field, where 40 per cent of the feeding value is lost.

If the youth in school studies the relative efficiency of the cows in his father's dairy, if he discovers that one cow is profitable while the one standing next to her is losing as much money for the owner as the other is making, and if he knows how to remedy these conditions, this factor which dairy farmers are neglecting more than any other one will in a short time be corrected and the dairy interests of the state will be greatly enriched.

IT WAS "MACHINE WORK" THEN Columbia U. D. C. Has Letter Written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis.

"Oh, what lovely machine work!" rather than "Oh, what lovely hand-work!" was the phrase used by the women fifty years ago. At least that might be inferred from a letter once written by Mrs. Jefferson Davis, wife of the president of the Confederacy.

This letter is now in the possession of the Columbia chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the gift of Mrs. E. W. Stephens, Mrs. Stephens got the letter from a friend in Chicago. The U. D. C. has voted to send it to the Historical Library of that organization in St. Louis.

The letter reads:

Private
Fortress Monroe, Va.,
April 16, 1867.

Miss Lucy J. Read,

My dear Miss Read,
Please accept my thanks for the very pretty little dress which you were so kind as to send our little Varina. It is really the prettiest piece of machine work I have ever seen, and having used Grover and Baker for so many years I know how difficult it must have been to get and keep the tension so perfectly as never to miss the under loop. It could scarcely have been sent to a more appreciative admirer than I am. Many thanks for your very kind expressions about my husband. He joins me in sending you our kindest regards, and thanks you for your remembrance of our little girl. Believe me

Very sincerely and respectfully yours,
VARINA DAVIS.
Mrs. Davis died in New York October 16, 1906. Her maiden name was Varina Howell. The little girl mentioned in the letter was born in 1861. She was best known as "Winnie" Davis, the "daughter of the Confederacy."

MINNESOTA PRIMARIES TODAY

Fight Is Hot One—No Prohibition or Socialist Tickets Filed.

By United Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 19.—Minnesota's state primary today concluded a lively fight. It was a state affair, with congressional seats in the offing.

Gov. J. A. A. Burnquist, who is filling out the unexpired term of W. S. Hammond, deceased, is the republican candidate for renomination who probably will get his name on the ballot at the election.

F. B. Kellogg, who gained national fame as a trust buster; Sen. M. E. Clapp, A. C. Eberhart, former governor and Congressman C. A. Lindbergh are after Clapp's toga. Their fight has been a merry one, not entirely free from mud. Lindbergh got a lot of Scandinavian and Progressive votes today.

In the Democratic gubernatorial fray, a three cornered fight has aroused much interest.

S. D. Works, C. M. King and T. P. Dwyer were the candidates. Works has been identified with the reactionary democrats in the state legislature. Dwyer, a Minneapolis boiler maker, polled a large labor vote. King is a good roads advocate.

Dan Lawler, democratic candidate for United States senator, was the only Fred Lynch faction democrat in the field. He was opposed by A. J. Davis of Minneapolis.

Socialists and prohibition tickets were not filed.
